Price Of Milk Is Raised At Pittsburgh Due To Drought Condition

(International News Service)
With official weather forecasts from Washington promising showers and thunderstorms Pennsylvanians awoke today to a vista of murky skies and receding temperatures with all indications pointing to a break in the heat wave that has gripped the state for weeks.

Developments today were: The State Health Department has begun emergency measures to bring drinking water to communities suffering from serious shortages.

An increase of one cent a quart in the price of milk, beginning August 16, was announced in the Pittsburgh district as a result of the drought. The price per pint remains at eight cents.

First efforts on the part of the health department to relieve the situation caused by depleted water supplies in Western Pennsylvania were directed at the towns of Bentleyville, Harnsville, Haystack, Uniontown, Waynesburg, Apollo and Leechburg. Emergency water supplies are being tapped to these communities.

PA NEW OBSERVES

When the Highland public school children return to classes in September they are apt to think they have returned to the wrong school. Painters who have been at work on the building, painting all of the windows frames white, have worked a transformation on the exterior of the building.

It now appears that certain fugitives from justice are not without exclusiveness. Perusing the excellent and high-toned Northwestern Police Journal at police headquarters the other night we discovered that important thugs and gunmen are advertised by sheriffs and police chiefs who would be delighted to meet them again, in the advertising section, along with ads about high priced automobiles, perfumes and hotels at summer resorts!

Waiting in the railroad telegrapher's tower to press an important executive of the system arrived in town, Pa. New learned from the telegrapher—that the telegraphers and not the locomotive engineers are the real heroes of the road. We were told that the telegrapher really tells the engineer what to do, how fast to go and when to stop. Yet, the telegrapher lamented, the engineer gets all the glory.

A sight which attracted much attention on Tuesday on South Mill street was a lad playing an old time accordion on the street.

Death Of Mother Is Tragic Ending Of Family's Tour

Family On Tour In Search Of Work Stranded Here—Mother Dies

Came To This Section From Toledo, Ohio, Few Days Ago Hunting Work

A sad ending to a family search for work was the sudden death of Mrs. Olive Irene Mickel, aged 63, Tuesday evening on the Bockius Farm, south of Cascade Park.

About ten days ago, the Mickels, Edward Sr., his wife Olive Irene, a son Edward Jr., his wife and several children left Toledo, where they had been living, and started out in search of work for the men. At each town they passed through the men made a diligent search for work, but were unable to find any.

Arrive In City
The party arrived in New Castle over a week ago and the car having broken down, they camped at the Cascade Park tourist ground and the men looked for work about the city, trying to get enough money together to have their car fixed and search further for work, but being unable to do so, the time allotted for tourists in the Park site had elapsed and the party was asked to move on. Having no money and no usable car, the men towed the broken car to the Bockius farm, south of the park, where they have been for a few days.

Mother Stricken
Mrs. Mickel had not been well for some time but Tuesday was taken seriously ill and the men carried her to the porch of the Bockius home, where they seated her on a rocker, but in a few minutes she had died. Coroner J. P. Caldwell was called and pronounced the death was caused by a heart condition. The body was removed to the Book-Leyde Mortuary on Neshannock avenue, awaiting word from relatives or friends.

Mrs. Mickel is survived by her husband, a son Edward and two daughters, Mrs. Jennie Starmer and Mrs. Edna Rahm of Toledo, and several grandchildren.

The Mickels resided in New Castle until twelve years ago, when they moved to Toledo.

Grace's Son Now Is Steel Worker

Charles B. Grace, Son Of Steel Magnate Found Working In Pittsburgh

(International News Service)
PITTSBURGH, Aug. 6.—Charles B. Grace, son of Eugene G. Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel company and a principal in the merger trial of the Bethlehem company with the Youngstown Sheet & Tube company, is quietly learning the steel industry in the offices of the southside plant of the Jones & Laughlin Steel corporation here, it became known today.

Unknown to most of his fellow workers as the son of the most-talked-of man in the steel industry today, young Grace is following in the footsteps of his father—who started in the plant of the Bethlehem Steel corporation in 1899.

Recently the youth graduated from Princeton university. He smiled a bit ruefully when discovered and appeared disappointed at learning his presence had reached the public press.

Asked how long he would remain with Jones & Laughlin he replied: "I don't know, that happens to depend on how long J. & L. will let me stay. I hope to become a member of the sales force."

Congress May Get Power To Control State Primaries

Senator Nye, South Dakota Says Amendment Will Be Offered To Next Congress

Senate Campaign Committee Has Accomplished Much Toward Cleaning Up Politics

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Constitutional amendment, giving congress the power to regulate primary elections in the states in the same manner it now controls general elections, will be introduced next fall, Senator Nye (R) of N. D., chairman of the campaign fund committee, announced today.

Nye declared developments at the current investigation into senatorial primaries revealed the need of a general governmental supervision. He was plainly gratified at the testimony given by Pennsylvania witnesses, at the resumed inquiry into the Davis-Grundy contest, that Federal control of the primaries would be welcomed.

Corruption Curbed
A long list of witnesses told the committee that senate inquiries, every other year, had brought improved conditions. One witness, Dean Hoffman, a Harrisburg editor, declared the knowledge that a "fearless senate" was watching had tended to curb corruption.

"One conclusion of all this testimony," said Nye, "is that corruption is being reduced. Another conclusion (Continued On Page Two)

Local Fair Eclipses All Other Attempts In Western Pennsylvania

Croton avenue today pressed time looked like Michigan Boulevard at five in the afternoon. This is expected to be a banner day. Everybody who can get there will be there. The racing starts this afternoon, and interspersing the races will be cow calling contests, hog calling contests, husband calling contests, feats of daring horsemanship by the Lieutenant Scava riders, a pony race for youngsters, a largest family contest and before and after the races the midway, the cattle barns, the exhibit halls, and all the rest of the entertainment offered for your approval.

Car Plunges Into Crowd; Man Killed

Accident Occurs At No. 5 Mine In Mercer County

One man is dead, a girl badly injured and several others slightly hurt as the result of an automobile plunging into a crowd of people in front of a medicine show at No. 5 Mine on Tuesday evening, after the car, being cranked was put in low gear by an occupant.

Charles Turner, 24, of Brent Mine, Lawrence county, is being held in the Mercer county jail pending a coroner's inquest into the tragedy.

Alek Penman, aged 55, died this morning from internal injuries received when struck by the machine. Margaret Boltz, aged 15, is suffering from injuries sustained when knocked down by the machine.

Turner, his wife, a baby and two-year old son, William had driven from Brent Mine to No. 5 to attend a medicine show. After the performance Turner was cranking his machine in front of the show. While cranking the machine, his son, William, put the car in low gear. The car plunged ahead, despite the efforts of Turner to deter its progress, and forged ahead into the crowd of people.

An investigation has been made by Coroner W. J. McGrath of Sharon. Turner is being pending an inquest to be held Friday at 3 p. m.

Calvacade At 7 O'clock
It is announced by the fair authorities that the calvacade this morning of stock at the fair, which usually takes place at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, will not be held in the afternoon, but will take place this evening at 7 o'clock, daylight time.

There are hundreds of entries of stock at the fair and the parade this year will be greater than ever before. Tuesday was opening day and like all opening days at fairs there wasn't much of a crowd. There never is so this one was no different. The booths were not all arranged, the concessions were not all up, but the people who went out saw a real fair even at that.

Late Tuesday afternoon everything was in readiness, the booths were all filled, the barns all filled, and the turnstile was all oiled up, waiting for the symphony of clicks that it is hoped will mark a banner attendance today and tomorrow.

Judging Contest
A judging contest for the boys and girls of the county was held Tuesday afternoon with H. B. McCulloch, County Farm Agent in charge, assisted by County Farm Agent Hager of Mercer county. The results will be published later. The judging of horses and cattle starts this afternoon with Dr. Samuel MacDougall of Grove City judging the draft horses. H. L. Roe of Syracuse, N. Y., a well known horseman is the starting judge of the races today and tomorrow and with his capable hand handling the gang, the races should get under way with speed. The track is hard and fast, built for speedy races and some records should topple in the two day session of speed.

This is Pennsylvania's first fair of the year and Lawrence County's best fair of its history. It needs only one thing to make it an outstanding success and that one thing is people, gobs of them, who will attend. This year's admission ticket gets you much more for your money than it did in any previous year and there seems to be no valid reason why the New Castle Fair should not be a blue ribbon winner this year.

Just one more word, or a couple of words. You really shouldn't miss the fair this year. It closes Thursday night and to miss it will be to miss a real exhibition. It's a community project, one in which no individual profits, one that deserves your whole hearted support. Moral support may have some place somewhere, but it isn't at the fair. Moral support backed up with half dollars at the gate is the only kind of support that counts. Giving three cheers wouldn't even bring rain.

FORT COLLINS, Colo., Aug. 6.—As the result of an accident, Shirley Wylie, 5, living on a ranch near here, has two pupils in one eye through which she can see perfectly.

The eye was struck by a screen door spring and the eyeball was cut in one corner. When it healed, there were two separate pupils.

While local physicians have heard of cases of eyes having two pupils, they say they never heard of the oddity resulting from an accident before.

You're the JUDGE

TOURING from town to town, in almost a recent Broadway success, was a theatrical troupe of half a dozen men and an equal number of women. In this town in which they had just arrived, there was an ordinance providing that a license be obtained before any public performance could be given in the town opera house. For some reason the troupe manager ignored the little matter of the required license, but needing another performer for a minor part he engaged a local actor for the evening. The performance went on in good form, and after the last curtain dropped, and the actors had taken their several curtain calls, the manager calmly prepared to leave the city, ignoring completely the other little matter of paying the local actor for his work.

The actor, however, was not without resourcefulness, and next day filed suit against the manager for a night's salary. Came eventually the trial. The manager recalled that he had failed to get a license for the performance and, basing his case upon that, argued that therefore the performance was illegal. Therefore, also, the actors were in an illegal enterprise and the local actor, now suing for his night's wages, could not make himself a party to an illegal act.

How would you decide this case? Make up your mind before you read the decision.

sion is that while corruption may continue it did not include the senatorial candidates in Pennsylvania to a large degree.

"I feel the testimony before our committee shows the need for Federal control of the primaries. If no one else does it, I shall offer a resolution next December giving congress the same power over primaries it now holds over general elections."

Plan Vacations
Members of the senate campaign committee meanwhile planned brief vacations before resuming the Illinois and Nebraska inquiries August 25. In the meantime, committee investigators will be watching the primary contests in Massachusetts and Colorado, with a possibility that investigators may also be sent into Oklahoma, New Jersey and Alabama.

The Pennsylvania inquiry was concluded for the present after one day's session. The highlights were a charge by Senator McCulloch, of Pittsburgh, that McGovern, of Pittsburgh, that elections have been and could be stolen in Pittsburgh under existing conditions, and a charge by Royal C. Stephens, Philadelphia reformer, that Senator Thomas D. Schall (R) of Minn., was offered his election expense up to $50,000 if he would lay off Grundy in the senate. Stephens said Schall told him personally of the offer and that it was made by a "man from the West."

The committee announced that Stephens' testimony would be sent to Senator McCulloch for a statement about the charge. As for McGovern's charges, Nye said an investigator would be sent to Pittsburgh in November to observe conditions during the general election.

"They steal anywhere from 12,000 to 30,000 votes in Pittsburgh in a primary," said McGovern. "The elections there are generally held on Wednesday or Thursday instead of on the Tuesday designated by law. There are some 300 machine districts where fraud occurs. If they make any mistake in computing the desired returns, before the ballot boxes are sent in to the county commissioners, they can make their corrections in the courthouse."

Artists At Stealing
"If you put these ballots into the hands of men accustomed to steal elections and they are artists at it, in one night they can change the result of any election where 15,000 votes will do it. It can be done; it has been done and it was done in the Beideman primary."

McGovern referred to the defeat of the late Edward E. Beideman for the Republican gubernatorial nomination in 1926 by Gov. Fisher although first returns showed the former had been nominated. McGovern said he had prevented any such upset this year by maintaining a day and night guard on the ballots.

Want Honest Elections
"I hope the Federal government will help us supervise our elections in Pennsylvania," said McGovern, "so we can have an honest election."

Some interesting testimony was given too by Walter A. Bonitz, millionaire brick manufacturer of Pittsburgh, who told of contributing $96,750 to the campaign fund of Secretary of Labor Davis. Bonitz said he had contributed heavily to gain control of the Republican organization in Western Pennsylvania.

"I have my own idea. I may be foolish or barking up the wrong tree," said Bonitz. "I believe in boring from within. It takes years to build a political organization. There are some fine men in office in Pittsburgh but I want to see some changes in our election system and there is some room for improvement. I am a fairly liberal contributor and I believe I can get along with my ideas from this inside."

Bonitz denied his heavy contributions were due to his being awarded brick contracts by the state. He said such stories were issued to "embarrass me and there's nothing to it."

STAR LORE

WINDS THAT BRING CLEAR WEATHER
By Arthur Dev. reporter

The "low" or area of low barometric pressure that carries the relatively warmer and therefore lighter air to higher altitudes, and known as a cyclone, lifts vast tons of air to higher levels. Air is always seeking to equalize its pressure. So when the upper regions become overladen with the weight of excessive atmosphere, and upper regions become overladen, and because of the greater density produced by lowered temperature, at a critical area this atmosphere starts descending with a spiral clockwise motion. This descending atmosphere is free from moisture. As this "high" or anticyclone descends, it clears the sky of clouds and mist, permitting the stars and the sun to shine brightly unobstructed.

FAIR FACTS AND FANCIES

scientific research into the innards of the pie.

One of the odd exhibits in the grange hall is a little boot that John Cox wore when he was a kid, 60 years ago. It is made of the kind of leather that doesn't wear out fast, and by now it is a family heirloom.

The state of Pennsylvania welfare department has an exhibit in merchants' hall that is well worth your time. Displays of work done by blind patients, by mentally unbalanced patients, and goods made by the temporarily restrained gentlemen in the Western penitentiary.

The Orthopaedic section of the display merits the attention of every woman in the county and it is urged that the women get out to see it.

James Ellis, in charge of the policing of the grounds stated that invalids who come out in cars will get special placing in the parking grounds. Remember that dandruff and halitosis do not constitute invalidity.

B. J. Biondi, the Creator of New Castle, has his Redcoats band out at the fair and they tootle a mean harmony. Beebe and his Redcoats are an attraction at anybody's fair and, by the way, who is this fella Sousa anyway?

As usual the state police and the highway patrol are on the job assisting. Five police and six patrolmen mean a heap to the success of the fair and if you notice that the crowd is well handled, give the boys a hand. Also remember that their Redcoats are in Butler on Labor Day and it isn't an exclusive affair.

J. Audley Boak is one of the busiest men at the fair, but not too busy to stick out his suspenders and tell you that he just harvested seven acres of wheat, getting 217 bushels of a crop which is some crop to be proud of.

Now if Mr. Legge of the farm board would step up the price of wheat a bit.

There is a taxidermy exhibit in the Merchants' Hall that shows some clever work. Deer heads, mounted snakes, bear skins, birds, or name your own and all of them looking lifelike.

One of the exhibitors out there has an Australian Sheep Dog as a pet and the dog is attracting as much attention as a paid exhibit. Long silky hair down below his nails and over his eyes.

Down at the speed barns one of the stable men has a Blue Belton dog that has been a big winner in her day. Jack Dempsey paid $700.00 for one of her pups. This is no advertising for "Sally" is now a pensioner.

Bob Weingartner's display of glad-die is bringing a lot of ohs and ahs from the spectators. Twelve hundred of the loveliest glads you ever saw in your life, arranged as tastefully as an artist's picture.

And in the same hall, Charley Andrews is back with his display of bricks. His display can be counted on as regularly as the hot dog stands. Always in and always rooting for the fair.

The Lawrence County Girls and Boys Bee Club has a display of honey that starts the saliva trickling down over your epiglottis. Jars of it, and all of it looking good. A sign on the stand says "golden rod makes good honey." Ed Russell comes right back with the crack that it "also makes splendid hay fever." But perhaps the bees carry masks.

If the fair consisted of nothing else but the cattle barns it would be worth seeing. Strapping big Jersey bulls, throwing a mean glare out of their eyes. Quiet looking cows, the kind faced kind, Guernseys, Holsteins, Short Horns with their beefy quarters, and Herefords with their curly coats. One Hereford bull must be the pride of the township where he lives with his permanent wave in his red, silky coat. And by the way what has become of the old favorite strain, the Brown Swiss cows?

Drop in at the hog pen at feeding time and hear the symphony. Grunts that range from factory whistle bass to violin tenor. And why do the pigs have to get their feet into their food? Perhaps this explains the old bromide about opening your mouth and putting your foot into it.

Several of the churches have refreshment stands under the grandstand, and seem to be doing a land office business.

Over in the office J. L. Burton and Mrs. Dent have their hands full clearing up to their elbows. Always there are late exhibitors wanting to know why they don't get a better space, and the answer this year is that everything was filled early.

It's a splendid fair. Going back this afternoon and to be a triple starved, silver plated yokel. Going to toss balls at the dolls, eat a lot of stuff I don't need and wash it down with a lot of drinkables that might not pass a dietician but taste good anyway. And you ought to be there.

BELIEVE HEAT WAVE IN STATE NEARING END

the rural sections which supply Pittsburgh with milk, it was announced. Meanwhile, precautionary measures were taken to prevent the spread of brush and forest fires already burning and to prevent the outbreak of others. A trench five miles long dug by scores of volunteer firefighters extinguish a blaze that spread over a large territory near Wildwood, destroyed a store and threatened farm homes.

The monetary loss entailed in fighting forest fires in Allegheny county alone during the last three days was estimated at $15,000. Fire Chief Richard L. Smith declared brush fires were due to "downright carelessness" and called upon Boy Scout organizations to aid in detecting and fighting the sporadic outbreaks.

Overcast skies brought a slight measure of relief to the heat-scorching areas of the eastern half of the state, and revived the hopes of the heat sufferers that rain will bring a further drop in temperatures.

The thermometer ranged upwards in the eighties today compared with the new all-time record of 98 degrees established in Philadelphia late yesterday. Not much relief from the oppressive weather, however, is held out before Friday, although the promised showers for this afternoon or tonight are expected to bring momentary relief in some sections.

Crops continued to shrivel today and additional damage was reported throughout Eastern Pennsylvania and in nearby New Jersey, Maryland and Delaware. In Lancaster county the tobacco crop especially was hard hit in addition to the damage to corn, potatoes and other farm products. It was estimated the damage in that county alone amounted to $100,000 daily.

The 2500 farmers of Montgomery county already have sustained a loss in excess of a million dollars because of the lack of rain according to R. G. Waltz, County Farm Agent. He said the damage to the corn and potato crops of that county are amounting to $200 daily for every farmer while their current farm products have been damaged a quarter of a million dollars. The drought has reached such a stage, Waltz asserted, that next year's hay crop throughout the county has been practically destroyed by the shriveling up of this year's planting. Pastures also have been greatly damaged.

WRINGER VICTIM IS IMPROVING

Mrs. Thomas Evans of Pennsylvania avenue who sustained a smashing finger while wringing clothes on Tuesday morning is reported improving. She was removed to the New Castle Hospital where she received treatment for the injury. She was removed to her home Tuesday afternoon.

Polish Celebrate Memorable Event

Sixteenth Anniversary Will Be Celebrated Of The Freeing Of Polish People

The American and Polish flags are flying today from the flagstaff on the Holy Trinity Polish church lawn, South Jefferson street as a mark of celebration.

Sixteen years ago today on August 6, 1914 a handful of Polish soldiers crossed the Russian border and declared war on the great power. It seemed sheer madness for 180 men to start such an enterprise, but this handful of men had a prophet for a leader, who foresaw that the Russian must collapse and the result would be a free Poland. This man was no other than J. Pilsudski and he convinced the nation that only the strong are taken into account by the powerful and the nation realized they must have an army in order to draw attention from the enemy. Under the leadership of Pilsudski, Poland raised an army and their political influence with France and England ended in the stabilization of peace and a free and united Poland.

Due to the efforts and gigantic endurance of Pilsudski and his "legions" the dream of Poland became a wonderful reality and today in this city and all over the world where Polish

Brunettes Defeat Blondes In Vote

(International News Service)

DENVER, Aug. 6.—If gentlemen prefer blondes, Denver men are apparently at variance with the rest of the world.

In a local questionnaire answered by 847 representatives of the business, industrial and professional world, the halo of the golden locks went down to defeat without even a feeble struggle. The brunettes received 95 per cent of the choices.

In the matter of colors, the men named white an almost 100 per cent choice, with black running a poor second. At the same time the 847 expressed a unanimous dislike for sleeveless frocks for street wear.

The fascination of a shapely limb, while still probably an important item in the local male's choice of a companion, is not the most important. Answering the question, "which point are you most likely to remember concerning a woman's appearance?" Ninety-eight per cent declared it was the face and pose to which they were first attracted.

As a last effort to set a good price for his wheat the farmer might dump it in the road and let sucker tourists run over it.

"Y" Campers Shed Clothes, But Don't Claim Ownership

Raincoats, Towels, Fishing Poles and Other Equipment Are Forgotten

Raincoats, towels, pajamas, bathing suits, shoes, fishing poles and other paraphernalia that goes to make a camping vacation a success, now await the owners at the Y. M. C. A.

When the "Y" ended its camping season at Camp Fred L. Rentz on the Slippery Rock creek last week, the camp supervisors discovered that clothes left behind by youngsters who visited the camp for a week or two, had accumulated. Now the "left overs" are in full view at the "Y" for owners who can identify their clothes or other belongings.

Young Burglars Are Captured

Two Young Burglars Attempt To Rob Jewelry Store, But Are Foiled

(International News Service)
PERKASIE, Pa. Aug. 6.—Two youthful burglar suspects were seized early today after one of them had been discovered in a jewelry store with more than $1000 worth of loot.

Aroused by the dropping of a tray of rings, J. W. Schanley proprietor of the store, ran to the rear of the store with a double barreled shotgun and caught one of the youths in the act of reaching for a tray of rings in the show window of the store. Forcing the youth to stand with his hands in the air, Schanley telephoned for aid. His brother-in-law, Clarence Snyder, a night watchman, employed nearby came to his assistance and the youth was handcuffed. A large revolver and more than $1,000 worth of Schanley's jewelry were found in his pockets.

Harry Wambel, a policeman, coming to the aid of the two men captured the second bandit suspect outside the store.

The youth caught in the store gave his name as James Blair, 22 of Chicago, while the second man said his name was George Connors, 22 of Philadelphia. Both carried revolvers.

Loose Ankles, a hilarious screen comedy about a modern girl who must marry the choice of her old-fashioned aunts or lose a fortune, has been scheduled for the Penn theatre and is to open Thursday.

This First National and Vitaphone all-talking hit was adapted from the stage comedy of the same name by Sam Jenney. It is one of the Burbank studio's funniest and peppiest productions.

A host of noted comedy players support Loretta Young and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., the youthful screen favorites, who are cast in the romantic leads. Louise Fazenda, Otis Harlan, Ethel Wales, Daphne Pollard, Inez Courtney, Edward Nugent, Norman Selby and Raymond Keane are all in the cast, which is really all-star, for each and every one of these popular favorites has seen his or her name in electric lights.

Miss Young's comedy role is arousing widespread attention because it follows right after her notable success as an emotional actress in "Fast Life". Critics are divided as to which type of part the 17-year-old leading woman should portray on the screen, as she is equally apt at both.

OCEANIC AIR COMMERCE

That all-British transatlantic dirigible of the R-100 did not pathfind in the air, but was of world interest for its contribution to the fund of experience which will decide whether trans-oceanic flying, particularly between America and Europe, will ever assume commercial proportions.

As a purely British enterprise between England and Canada the northern route followed by the British colossus of the air might prove feasible for some months of the year, but is would certainly have many disadvantages in winter. Storms, ice, snow and fog probably would combine to make transportation by air over this route not only dangerous but impractical for eight months of the year.

When aircraft start regular service between these two continents they will be found taking the southern route by way of the Azores and with a western destination far down the Atlantic coast by way of the United States. The United States, and not our neighbor to the north, is destined to play this new terminal role in world transportation.

But regularity in this field of air commerce is not to be anticipated until the proposed chain of landing stages is anchored at convenient distances across the Atlantic to offer safe havens and refueling stations. That chain will be found, when and if it materializes, far south of the ice field.

CANADIAN TARIFF

Results of the Canadian election mean nothing more nor less than the hard-pressed farmers, unemployed workers and struggling business men of the dominion are convinced that if prosperity is to return it must come through a high protective tariff. The United States came to the same conclusion a few weeks ago.

Americans, who believe in protection as a principle, will recognize that their doctrine applies to Canada as distinctly as to the United States. If it is good for one it is just as good for the other.

Business below the international line has nothing to fear from high duties above that line. As the Canadians increase their own prosperity and raise their wages and living standards by protective tariffs, they increase their buying power, and when they increase their buying power the volume of trade between the states and the dominion will expand.

Americans, therefore, have no reason for anxiety over efforts by Canadians or any other people to improve their economic status, provided, of course, that these are well judged and effective. If policies should operate the other way, increasing poverty among the people, instead of promoting prosperity, that would be cause for alarm in the United States.

The more enlightened economic order of the twentieth century rejects the ancient delusion that one country profits by the losses of another. A world without business is a world without money to buy.

CAN A CITY BE TOO BIG?

Ambitious cities like Chicago, Detroit and Los Angeles, which at times have fondly dipped into the future and pictured themselves, respectively, as the metropolis of America, must have got a distinct shock out of the census figures for New York.

New York, it develops, has been going ahead just as fast as these other towns. Its population now is just under 7,000,000. Its "metropolitan district" contains no less than 11,000,000 people—more than there are in the next seven largest cities in America put together.

So, while Chicago continues to grow, and Detroit comes forward to step on the heels of Philadelphia, and Los Angeles shoots past half a dozen cities to land in fifth place New York retains its pre-eminence. It is still our metropolis, and it probably will hold that distinction for a long time.

For those of us who do not live in any of these cities, all of this is merely a matter of academic interest. Nevertheless, it is about time that we put our biggest cities under the microscope to see just what they signify. Does their bigness, in itself, make for a better life for their inhabitants? Does the New Yorker, who has 6,000,000 near neighbors, have a better time than the man from Topeka, who has 64,000? Is it possible for a city to become too big?

It would take a great deal of study and a great many volumes of facts to answer these questions properly. Meanwhile, however, there are surface indications that are significant.

Traffic congestion in New York is, today, almost unendurable. In Chicago the situation is only slightly less bad. In cities like Detroit, Los Angeles and Cleveland it is more than bad enough.

Living conditions, for enormous numbers of the inhabitants of these big cities, are unspeakable. If anything is certain it is that the lawless gangs of our great cities are bred by the congested, unhealthy circumstances under which thousands of children grow to manhood.

Politically, these super-cities are grotesquely unwholesome. The average New Yorker is at the mercy of the machine of Tammany Hall. The average Chicagoan is at the mercy of an even less admirable machine. In each case the sheer size of the city gives the machine ample opportunity to maintain its grip on government.

Those are only a few instances of what big population figures mean. It is almost time for the American people to look into the matter thoroughly and find out if the city whose population is not so large is not, perhaps, better off than the one whose population is doubling by the millions every two decades.—The Topeka Daily Capital.

Just a Little Sunlight.
 The Prosperous 16,000.
 You Can't Breed Genius.
 Important Baby Coming.

By ARTHUR G. BRISBANE

A little sunlight came filtering through dark business clouds Monday. Business failures in July carried smaller liabilities than for the same month a year ago.

The stock market, which reflects men's prosperity opinions, was more cheerful.

In one of Racine's tragedies, the lady says to her husband: Ne voutiez pas vous perdre, et vous ees sauve, which means "Don't try to destroy yourself, and you are saved."

Somebody ought to say that to American business. Its troubles are largely born of its own fears.

"The people's lobby" at Washington, busy protecting the 120,000,000 busy elsewhere, says to Mr. Edison: "You are good at asking questions. Answer these five, for a change."

Part of one question is: "Do you think America can be prosperous with one per cent of the people owning three-fifths of the wealth, and less than 16,000 people getting an 18th of the national income, etc.?"

One answer to that might read: "When the 120,000,000 get ready to think, use their brains and their votes, they will improve their condition."

Meanwhile, they will contribute to the 60,000 that do think, or hire corporation lawyers, members of congress and other officials to think and work for them.

Siegfried Wagner, son of the great Richard, died Monday. Eugenists, stirpiculturists and those who believe that better human beings can be bred than we have better homes, will admit that he was a disappointment.

His father was the third greatest musician. His mother, Cosima Wagner, was the daughter of the great master Liszt.

And, as a musician, Siegfried Wagner amounted to nothing. Although he did write operas, and was a moderately good conductor.

Genius, apparently, "just happens."

The Duchess of York, who married a son of King George, is at Glamis Castle, in Scotland, celebrating her 30th birthday, with Sir Henry Simson, distinguished obstetrician, quartered in the castle, and the home secretary, J. R. Clynes, on the way there.

The home secretary must be present at a royal birth, to testify that everything was in order, and that the baby was a real one.

He couldn't possibly recognize the baby in a year. Finger printing would be better, but the British are conservative.

These are news items, each with a thought.

Albert Coates, at Cyrus H. K. Curtis' request, names the 50 greatest composers.

Mr. Coates, excellent musician thanks to alphabetical order, puts Bach first, Beethoven second. Beethoven should be first, although he called Bach greater than himself, saying that his name, Bach, which means "brook," should have been "ocean" or "third in Mr. Coates' list, and the rest are nowhere, in comparison.

The lady bitten three times is not satisfied.

Recently, our fine battleship Utah, competing with all the ships in our navy, won the prize for greatest efficiency.

And this fall, the Utah, Wyoming and Florida will all be scrapped, in accordance with the London naval treaty.

Practically, it matters little, since we only lose, in case of war, three targets for airplanes.

But can you imagine anything sillier than destroying battleships that cost 40 to 50 million dollars each, in obedience to foreign orders, and then proceeding to spend one billion dollars on cruisers with six-inch guns that, according to our ablest navy officers, will do us no good when we get them?

A man and woman in Chicago tried to collect a ten thousand dollar accident policy they had on their son who was executed for murder and they claimed a "right to the money" because their son was killed accidentally and against his will when the law took his life. They also claimed unknown hands took his life. People will sue for most anything these days no matter how ridiculous the case may be.

Ain't It The Truth! Bad men are bad everywhere, but particularly when they obtain power. There are too many bad men, and weak men, and little men, in office, both in church and state. Sometimes it seems as if most of our social and political troubles arise out of the venality of the incompetency of those in office. Consider what conditions might be if all our governors and sheriffs and mayors and judges and juries were capable and incorruptible. This is not intended as a thrust against any. Both church and state are fortunate in having many excellent leaders, and we should never indulge in criticisms that might weaken the hands of these or diminish public confidence in them. Still, there are exceptions, and when men invested with power do fail in their obligations, many people and interests must suffer.

The lust for power is one of the chief dangers to our social and civil life, and it is usually the smaller and cheaper men that indulge this passion. There are some men who do not scruple to work for themselves and even to stoop to trading and bribing in one form or another, to get some office. It is the shame of the entire group when such arts are allowed to succeed. Merit usually tells, but we shall never be safe until it always tells, and those who should rule do rule. Nothing but scathing rebukes should be the reward of bad men and little men who are trying to climb into big places. Democracy has its perils, and one of these is the facility with which unworthy men push themselves into office.

When it happens not only do the people suffer, but the good men, especially the young men, are wronged.

They are deprived of a proper incentive of social service. That was a memorable utterance of old Eschines. "You know well that it is not music nor the gymnasium or the schools that mould young men; it is much more the public proclamations, the public example. If you take one whose life has no high purpose—one who mocks at morals—and crown him in a theater, every boy who sees it is corrupted. The character of a city is determined by the character of the men that it crowns."

These eloquent words have been confirmed by the experience of the ages. The character of our modern cities and villages is determined by the character of the men whom they elect to public office. We need better facilities for becoming acquainted with the character and the record of candidates, and we need to take a deeper interest in the election of our leaders, upon whom so much depends. Capable men cannot be withheld into office, nor can we assume that every man who wants an office is fit for it. Anyone who stoops to unworthy methods to get preferment should be stigmatized promptly and effectually.

Fascist Efficiency Praised When Quake Brings Disaster

Prospect That Italy Will Create New Type Of Buildings Believed Outstanding Feature Of Great Disaster

Praise for the efficiency of the Fascist government is evident in comment on the Italian earthquake. It is deplorable that some of the picturesque features of the Mediterranean country have been eliminated, but predictions are made that future building in the earthquake zone will be along the lines of resistance to the forces of nature.

"The rapidity, determination and thoroughness with which the government rose to the occasion fills the world with admiration," declares the ST. LOUIS TIMES. The CHARLESTON DAILY MAIL observes that "the kinship of the world, so often put to severe strain through the infirmities, selfishness, ambitions and cross-scheming of mankind, is made manifest when disaster comes," and the LOUISVILLE COURIER-JOURNAL declares: "Never before has Mussolini's gospel of work been more needed or his demand for national unity had a higher purpose. Let the credit go where it may, the world will acclaim the present effort of Fascist Italy."

"The American Red Cross, always prompt in the field with proffers of aid on occasions of major calamities like the Italian earthquake," says the WASHINGTON EVENING STAR, "inquired whether help from this country could be of service. Word came back that it would not be required—Italy could and would care for her own. Sometimes nations show their best and strongest side amid such conditions as those the Italian people are now facing and weathering. It is no mean tribute to the strength of present-day Italy that she is capable of meeting and shouldering one of the gravest crises the Fascist regime has yet had to confront. It speaks well alike for the spirit of Fascism and for the sound economic structure it has built up within the state it rules."

"Nothing can be done," according to the SEATTLE DAILY TIMES, "to curb these mighty forces; man can only rescue the stricken or move out of the danger zone. An earthquake no doubt is the most terrifying of the natural phenomena. When the earth begins to heave and rock he is bewildered and filled with terror. And the rush of mighty winds add to his misery and danger. Psychologists have speculated on the effect of living constantly in danger of earthquakes and volcanic eruptions. It is their opinion that the presence of such perils leave their impress on the minds of the people. Nations that live in the firm and quiet regions of the earth know nothing of the trials which have tempered the character of the Italian people."

That Italy, like Japan, "will rebuild her destroyed towns of materials that can more strongly resist earthquakes," is emphasized by the ALBANY EVENING NEWS, observing that "the new buildings will be of reinforced concrete and will be of one and two stories."

The NEWS concludes with the query: "Eventually Italy may be able to make itself much safer from earthquakes, but will it be possible to make structures absolutely quake proof?"

The ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH points out that "even the sites of some wrecked towns will be changed, in view of the modern observation that a bedrock foundation is more likely to be temblor-proof than an earthen," and that paper adds as to the accepted methods: "The Japanese, living in a land of earthquakes, have learned to build their foundations thick and broad, their roofs light, their chimneys short. The new Tokyo, profiting from the disaster of 1923, applied these principles, and doubtless they will also be followed in Italy. To construct a house so braced and put together that a shock will cause it to move as a unit rather than falling to pieces is the aim of the builder in an earthquake country. Since science cannot as yet give earthquake warnings, the citizen's only security is a shock-resistant house. Italy has 10,000 of these to build, to replace those now in ruins, and probably many a dwelling outside the devastated area will be remodeled as an aftermath of the disturbance."

"These earthquakes are not surprising or terrifying to the scientist," remarks the DULUTH HERALD. "He expects them."

expects them. To the average man the earth is the most permanent thing. A scientist with the aplomb of his group has spoken of its surface as "shimmering," meaning quivering. To him, looking backward upon ages, the surface of the earth is not permanent. Still this is only in relation to geological time. The HAVERTHILL GAZETTE believes that "Italians will not lack the hope that means the overcoming of the consequences of the ruin and death that have befallen them" that "they have survived other earthquakes more terrible than this, and have continued their development."

"It is a mighty task," states the PROVIDENCE BULLETIN, "but one can understand Mussolini's determination that the Italian state must assume the responsibility of it, however arduous, and the people of the United States are prepared—eager in fact—to give freely of their material resources with the same generosity with which they now extend their sympathies." The UNIONTOWN HERALD comments: "The Italian government is going about the work of rescue and relief in an exceptional, commanding and comprehensive manner. It is prophetic of what may be expected when the actual work of rehabilitation of the devastated sections is begun."

"Cheers and tears" which accompanied King Victor Emmanuel's visit to the quake-shaken regions impress the BALTIMORE SUN, as it notices that "his tour brought forth a genuine and strong emotional response, and to the frightened survivors of the disaster he was able to give a measure of comfort and confidence." The SUN concludes that, "in such a time, he means something to Italy which no dictator, though masterful and efficient and strong, could mean."

Scientists Seek Teeth Of New Mastodon Specimen

(International News Service)
BERKELEY, Cal., Aug. 6.—Anyone having the teeth of Pliomastodon Vexillarius will please bring or send them to the department of paleontology of the University of California.

This was the word that went out as Dr. W. Matthew, head of the department, proceeded with the work of reconstructing a huge mastodon, the fossilized skull of which was discovered recently in the Kettleman Hills oil fields, Kings county.

The skull was presented to the University of California by the Standard Oil company, whose workmen uncovered the ancient relic, but before it could be removed souvenir hunters carried away most of the teeth and part of the jaws.

Despite the disappearance of the bones, Dr. Matthew and his assistants have made considerable progress in building up a reconstruction of the skeleton, which belonged to a mastodon of a hitherto unknown species. The name Pliomastodon Vexillarius was chosen by Dr. Matthew. Vexillarius is Latin for "standard bearer."

The Kettleman Hills skull, according to Dr. Matthew, belonged to a mastodon which lived during the Pliocene epoch, preceding the Ice Age. "There are several kinds," the paleontologist said, "and the four skeletons mounted in American museums each represented a different type. The Kettleman Hills specimen is believed to be the only complete skull of a pliocene mastodon thus far found in California, and the exact species to which it belongs is not yet known."

"The missing teeth would definitely clear up this point, but we have enough of the skull and skeleton to gain a fairly clear idea of what the animal looked like."

"The trunk is shorter than in elephants, and did not hang freely downward; a good part of it rested on the longer muzzle and jaws, somewhat as does the proboscis of the tapir."

"The low-hung, forward reaching head also had some suggestion of the tapir about it. The tusks were stout, short and probably not much curved. Unfortunately, in this specimen, they have been mostly destroyed. The legs were elephant-like, but shorter than in modern elephants, and the animal very likely was covered with hair, though as to this we have no direct evidence, nor upon the size of the ears, color of skin or hair, and other surface features.

"Mastodons of various species appear to have been fairly common in America during the later Miocene, Pliocene and Pleistocene epochs. The animals represented by the Kettleman Hills skull was contemporary with the latest three-toed and earliest one-toed horses, with camels large and small, with wolves and bears, lions and saber-tooth tigers, all different from those found today."

"The last of the American rhinoceroses had apparently become extinct before this time, and the bison and mammoths had not yet reached North America from Asia."

"California in the Pliocene had a climate similar to that of the present, offering probably much the same varied environment and topography as today. The Kettleman Hills probably were then a broad alluvial plain adjacent to the flooded Great Valley, and into this plain along the margins of the inland sea were borne the sediments of rivers. Animals came down to feed along the river-borders, were caught now and then in quicksands, or died through accident, disease or attacks of carnivorous enemies, and their remains were scattered here and there along the shore or buried in the sands or muds."

"What special fate befell the owner of this skull we do not know, but we can picture him browsing in the brush and thickets along the stream, huge and hairy, indifferent to the small animals, fearing no enemy save possibly the fierce, saber-tooth, but careful to avoid soft and treacherous ground where so large a beast might easily be mired."

"Like modern elephants, he may have been subject to occasional attacks of rage or fear, in which his normal shrewd caution would be lost and he might then plunge recklessly into deep mire or water, and so perish as he did, in the prime of his life."

"The heavy skull and limb bones would sink and remain, while the lighter and smaller bones would be washed down stream or destroyed by surface weathering."

Youth Hunted As Slayer Of Officer

Paul Hurley, 18, Former St. Mary's School Student Hunted By Boston Police

OFFICER KILLED
HALTING HOLDUP

(International News Service)
NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Police here today continued to search for Paul Hurley, 18, former student at St. Mary's school, Pittsburgh, in connection with the fatal shooting of Patrolman Joseph P. O'Brien, a Brookline, Mass., policeman in the Boston suburb Sunday night.

Thomas Healy, 18, prep-school student of Pittsburgh, today was under arrest on a charge of murder in connection with the case. He was arrested late yesterday by local police when he stepped nervously from a Boston-New York bus in the bus station here.

The address Healy gave to police is 518 Armandale St., Pittsburgh, where he says he lived with his mother and sister. The two friends, according to Healy, went to St. Mary's school in Pittsburgh.

Boston police have announced that Healy is also wanted in Scranton, Pa., on a larceny charge.

Admits Crime
At police headquarters, Healy frankly admitted that he and Paul stole an automobile in Boston Sunday night and used it in an attempt to rob a Brookline drug store. Healy and Hurley were to have met at a designated spot here yesterday but Paul failed to show up, police say.

"Paul had a summer job as a bell hop," Healy explained to police, "and I went to Boston Friday to join him for two weeks. He had lost his job and desperate for money. Paul had a gun and persuaded me to join him in a stickup."

"We wandered around all day Sunday but couldn't get up enough nerve to hold up anybody. Then that night we saw the drug store which looked like 'easy picking'. We had just gone in when the policeman arrived and fired twice at Paul who fired four times in return.

"We hurried back to Boston, abandoned the car, and decided to come to New York on separate buses."

Police here said young Healy would be sent back to Massachusetts to face a murder charge.

The Parent Problem

by GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

Overcoming Loneliness Is Difficult

Every now and then an adolescent boy or girl who has read this column writes me a touching letter asking for advice on how to escape from suffering from loneliness and from feeling that nobody cares for him.

"I know I should try to be happy with other boys and girls," writes one "but I don't know how." Parents have told me of children who said they wished they were dead, "since nobody likes me."

To such young men and women I always write sympathetically for I know that they have been suffering keenly. I want to say to any discouraged youth who may read this article that you can get relief if you will sit down and work out a program. But you must know that you cannot get good results all at once; you must work long and patiently with yourself. You, no doubt, have built up long-time habits of finding pleasure all alone and of keeping away from others of your age who seem happier than you feel.

The easiest thing for the moment is to day-dream and seek solitude. But you know very well that you get only temporary relief from doing so. Make yourself spend a certain number of minutes a day with others of your age. Plan ahead what you are going to do and say. Rehearse some experience, some story or clever remark which you are sure you can relate so as to win approval. If you can find nothing better read the comic strip for source material. Once you find a story you can tell effectively repeat it often before new groups. Don't feel you must be always talking but be sure that you have a few remarks well selected which you can relate in an interesting fashion; then be wholly satisfied to give the stage to others.

When you leave the group call to mind your successes; pat yourself on the back for doing so well. When failures come to your mind crowd them out as beneath your consideration. It may help you to write down at least one a day, in a secret book, some little achievement of yours. Read over and over those you have written.

It will do a lot of you parents good to pursue a similar program with yourselves. You can help your child who often grows discouraged and depressed by reminding him of one or more specific successes in getting along with others. Don't allow yourself to say to a child that he is foolish to be so depressed or that he should "snap out of it." Such suggestions only make him more conscious of his shortcomings, more likely to worry about himself. Keep his attention off his failures. Be sympathetic, but do not encourage his self-pity.

Scouting, hiking and camping have helped many a child.

Parents of young children should do their utmost to encourage youngsters to mingle freely with many other children. Better that they have bad playmates than have none. The most unfortunate child is he who learns not early to find his chief enjoyment with others of his age.

I shall be glad to answer, in these columns, questions addressed to me in care of this paper, provided these questions seem to be of general interest.

If you have a question you would like to have answered personally write me enclosing a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Answer to Previous Puzzle

Peter's Adventures

MR. FLORENCE VINCENT

LAZY GOOD-FOR-NOTHING

Why should a Queen dig in the ground? This was queer enough. But what was even stranger—why should she take off her wings when she worked? Here were two questions to which Peter could not guess the answers, and so he asked Ant. And Ant, wise as only an Ant can be, told him.

"There's nothing in these facts to puzzle anybody," remarked that insect. "The King of the Ants is no better than any other male in Ant-Hill Town—he's just as lazy as can be. And so, when the Queen wants a palace well built she has to go out and do it herself. Use your head, Boy, and think for yourself! When she works, the Queen unhooks her extra wings, because if she didn't these would get in her way as she worked, wouldn't they? A Queen Bee believes if anything's worth doing at all it is worth doing well. So she flies once and never again. To avoid temptation, she takes off her wings and settles down to labor for the rest of her life as soon as her first flight is over."

"That's the second time you have mentioned the Queen's first fly," remarked Peter. "Just what do you mean?"

"I'll have to begin at the beginning and tell you a story," said Ant. "I had forgotten that you didn't know the simplest facts about Ant life. For instance, you don't know all Ants are divided into three sorts of folks, did you?" Peter shook his head, and Ant continued. "There are the males, the females and the neuters. By the way, you're a male, aren't you?"

"I should say I am, and proud of it!" exclaimed Peter. Ant snickered. "If you were an Ant you wouldn't brag about that," said he. "In Ant-Hill Town a male is a good-for-nothing. He lazes all the day through, basks in the sun and comes to a sad end that serves him perfectly right, since he has done nothing at all to help make the world better and brighter. A shirk, that's all Mr. Ant is, and you'll find few of the rest of us to say a good word for him!"

"I SHOULD SAY I AM, AND PROUD OF IT," EXCLAIMED PETER

Canadian Railway To Operate Planes In Conjunction With Service

VANCOUVER, B. C., Aug. 6.—Entrance of Canadian railways into the field of air transportation was announced today by Sir Henry Thornton, president of Canadian National Railways, a government-operated road.

Sir Henry said Canadian National and the Canadian Pacific Railway privately owned, had acquired an interest in Western Canada Airways and Canadian Airways, the two largest systems of the Western and Eastern districts of Canada. How large the interest was he did not say, but he intimated that the purchase was merely a beginning for them.

The Canadian Railways are following the lead of American railways in adopting for their own this newest method of transportation.

The Pennsylvania system, the Santa Fe, the New York Central and other roads hold large interests in American air lines, and co-operate with them in joint rail-air systems.

Whether such transcontinental systems are planned by Canadian Pacific and Canadian National, Sir Henry did not say.

Leaps From Bridge Into River, Drowns In Suicide Attempt

(International News Service)
PITTSBURGH, Aug. 6.—An unidentified, red-haired youth about 20 years old, paused on the twenty-second street bridge late Tuesday glanced casually at a newspaper in his hand and then jumped into the turbulent Monongahela river, still holding the paper.

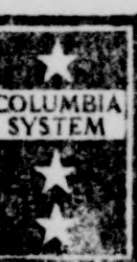

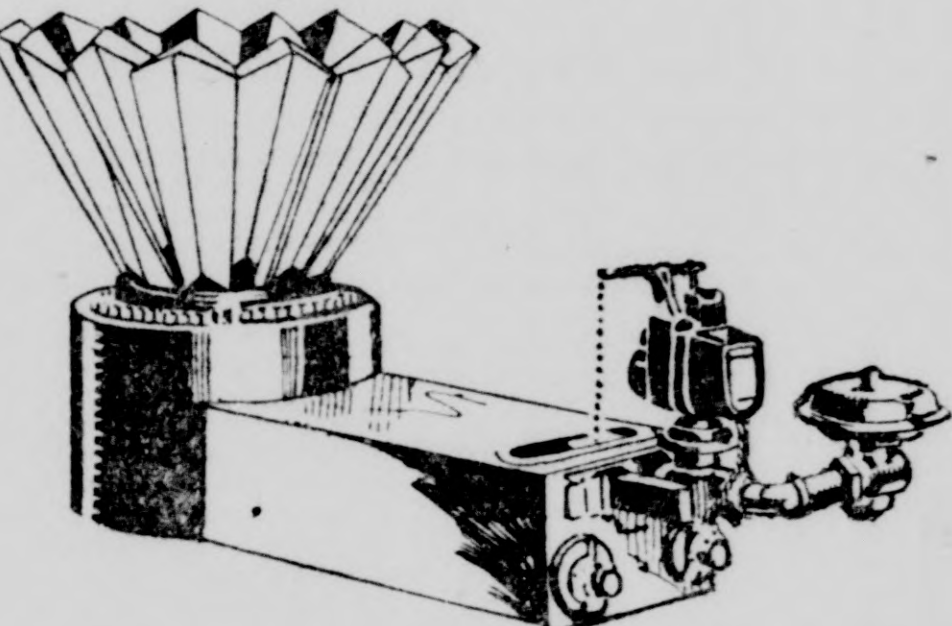

His body was recovered 15 minutes later. In his pockets were a street car pass, three pennies and a key. His belt buckle was stamped with the letter "R."

Police said the youth was known on the South Side as "Red."

If the small boys do not come down from the trees, it might be advisable to send a few arithmetics up after them.—The Oakland Tribune.

National Farm Outlook

By ARTHUR H. JENKINS
Editor, The Farm Journal
Written for Central Press

From the things I read in the newspapers it is plain that many people still do not grasp the difference between a co-operative selling organization and a stabilization corporation.

Probably a great many people do not care either. But for those who do take some interest in the farm situation it is really important to understand how unlike these two kinds of organizations are.

Perhaps I ought to say, first, that neither one of them is the same as the federal farm board, and neither of them is the government. People use words very loosely, as a rule, but to say "the government is holding 69,000,000 bushels of wheat" as I read in a newspaper the other day is beyond all bounds of loose language.

The government has nothing to do with the wheat trade except to advance money to the farm board.

The farm board does nothing except give advice and lend money. Neither of them buys, sells, owns or holds wheat or any other commodity whatever.

It is perfectly plain to anyone with an ounce of economic sense that this process can go only so far. Stabilization will work nicely on small seasonal surpluses and shortages. But where there are no shortages it all, here or anywhere else in the world, that is a very different matter. It would be absurd to expect the stabilization corporation to take 69,000,000 bushels of wheat this year, 100,000,000 more the year after that, and so on. Yet this is exactly what would happen if the world surpluses should continue, and the corporation should keep on buying.

There is not that much money in the treasury, nor that much storage space in the country. It is too ridiculous to talk about.

A co-operative selling organization takes the wheat of its own members or the cotton, or whatever it is and sells it the best way it can. Its sole function is to sell. And in any normal year it sells every bushel or bale that is turned over to it, to somebody at some price. It should finish up each crop year with nothing on hand unsold.

The stabilization corporation, on the other hand, is a new kind of agency, the purpose of which is to stabilize prices by buying when there is too much of something for sale, holding it as long as necessary, and selling it when the market calls for it.

This last season, for example, the grain co-operative had it could not sell some of its wheat to advantage in the market. The wheat stabilization corporation thereupon bought this surplus letting the co-operative out. And this is the 69,000,000 bushels that now are being held off the market.

If it were possible to get hold of 200,000,000 bushels of wheat, and 3-000,000 bales of cotton, put them in a pile, burn them to ashes, and assess every wheat and cotton grower pro rata to cover the loss, that would very likely be the most intelligent plan of all.

It is a pity it can't be done.

Children Suffer Lack Of Rich Vitamin B

(International News Service)
BERKELEY, Cal., Aug. 6.—Even with the wide variety of foods found on the average American table, there is still a chance of children suffering from a deficiency of growth promoting, nerve stimulating vitamin B unless cereal cooked foods are included in the diet.

This bad news for "little Willie" who doesn't like "breakfast foods" comes from Dr. Agnes Fay Morgan, professor of household science and Margaret M. Barry, graduate student of the University of California.

They obtained their evidence by studying undernourished children from 11 to 13. "Those fed rolls containing a large amount of wheat germ gained weight much faster than was expected. They also increased in stature."

Dr. Morgan attributed the deficiency in vitamin B to the increased use of milk, sugar, fruits and vegetables.

Pittsburgh Lowest In Typhoid Cases

(International News Service) PITTSBURGH, Aug. 6.—This city had fewer deaths from typhoid fever than any other city in the United States during the first six months of 1930, according to a report issued by the filtration division of the City Bureau of Water today.

Only two deaths were reported here during the six months period, the report stated. One of these was from Apollo, Pa. The death was charged against Pittsburgh when the patient was removed to the West Penn hospital here and died.

Figures upon which the comparison basis rate was made were compiled by the United States Public Health Service.

During the six months period only ten cases of typhoid were reported, showing a decided improvement over past years.

Yachts Collide In
Start Of Regatta

Yachts Ready For Start Of Big Regatta Crash; One Of Crew Drowned

(International News Service) COWES ISLE OF WIGHT, Eng., Aug. 6.—Before the eyes of King George and other members of the royal family, two fast racing yachts collided today at the start of the Royal Squadron races here, resulting in the sinking of one of them and the loss of a member of its crew.

The yachts were the 55-ton Lucilla, owned by J. Lauriston Lewis, and the other the big Cutler Lulworth, property of A. A. Paton. Lucilla sank within three minutes after the crash. Her steward was drowned.

All other members of Lucilla's crew were picked up by Lulworth.

The accident occurred as the yachts were maneuvering for the start. His Majesty and members of his family were aboard the Royal Yacht Britannia, which has been competing in the events with the king on board for the first time since his nearly fatal illness.

The yachts collided with a loud report, the Lucilla being stove in by the huge Lulworth below the water line. Quick action by the crew of the Lulworth succeeded in saving all members of the crew except the steward.

Lulworth withdrew from the race after the collision, the first accident to mar the brilliant Cowes regatta.

By Central Press.
NEW YORK—Syl. Sullivan, industrial economist and wizard of the "mike," was holding forth the other afternoon on "Silk Worms and Honey Bees."

In the course of his talk, by transition sweet, he slid to the object of home cooking, fresh eggs and things, and then he said:

"Where, in New York, can one procure DUMPLINGS—good, old-fashioned, palate-tickling, wholesome and alluring DUMPLINGS?"

If you are one of those benighted individuals who thinks that there are no ladies left in Manhattan who fuss around the old pot-and-pan garage, you ought to take a squint at some of Mr. Sullivan's next-day's mail.

He received at least fifty protests from outraged female DUMPLING architects and, as he says: "Only the Lord knows how many more there are who couldn't master their emotions, sufficiently, to write."

CLASS, PLUS
New York's outstanding Pearl Pavilion and Diamond Den is located on the Rue de la Quinze—a stately granite pile that fairly oozes wealth and respectability. The clerks have all been there for years and years. You never in your life saw such a bunch of eminently respectable men as those clerks. Even the detectives—"house dicks" they're called in other shops, but "detectives" in this particular place—exude the spirit of all that is forth-right and conscientious in the law.

It's some dump!
And they pride themselves on their clientele. They don't page customers with frayed purses. Naturally, they accept anyone's money; but by their attitude it's easily seen that in their patrons, they crave Class.

A gentleman from the Middle Stratum entered this mausoleum the other day. He had a watch with a fractured main-spring. Would they repair it? They would. They did, and charged him $16 for so doing.

The gentleman from the Middle Stratum—who perspires, pays his debts and sits down and writes to the editor whenever he encounters injustice in life, following his usual bent, addressed a communication to the head of the Pear Pavilion telling him that $16 for repairing the main-spring of a watch was an outrageous price and whatnell was he going to do about it?

The head of the firm wrote back and said: "How much do you think we should have charged you?"
"Four dollars would have been a fair price," replied the man from the Middle Stratum.

The following day he received a check for $12.
The man is now walking round town telling everybody he meets about the transaction, not realizing that he is giving the concern thousands of dollars worth of free publicity.

When they're too Respectable, look out. There's usually a trick in it somewhere.

"SILK HAT GUS."
Individuality has a way of cropping out no matter how deep down in the pile Fate may consign its possessor.

There are thousands of bootblacks in New York. An average man, entering the ranks of the Pedal Polishers, is contented to slide down into the warm, safe depths of mediocrity and there linger to the end of his days.

Some men, however, just can't stay put. There's Silk Hat Gus, for example.
Gus has a three-chair booth at Canal and Lafayette streets. In a measure, adding annex he maintains equipment for refurbishing "Ladies' and Gents' Hats."

One time a bibulous barnstormer stopped by with a silk hat that he wanted reconditioned. Gus did his best; but charity demands the briefest sort of discourse on the job.

Gus waited the return of the barnstormer with trepidation, but he never came back. For months the silk hat reposed on the shelf, and one day Gus took it down, tried it on and found it fit him perfectly.

A customer stopped by to have his calf skins rejuvenated. Gus, with a cigar at an angle of forty-five degrees protruding from a corner of his mouth, and the silk hat on the back of his head, went to work with his usual assiduity.

The customer fared forth from the little bootblack stall and told the story. In a week Gus's trade had doubled. There was something fantastic in the idea of having one's shoes shined by a swarthy gent wearing a silk hat and puffing a Chloride de Limon.

Today lecturers on the rear piazzas of sight-seeing buses point out "Silk Hat Gus" to the customers as one of the sights of the city.

Night Dresses For Summer Are All Transparent

By ALICE LANGELEIR
International News Service Staff Correspondent

PARIS, Aug. 6.—Dream dresses for midsummer nights are full of fancy, frills and femininity. Folds and folds of fabric make every one of them a real enchantment. Layers and layers of the transparent stuff the dress-makers are using make the feminine figure of 1930 seem positively fairy-like. All of them are transparent from the cobwebby glossy silk mousseline to the heavy cotton nets.

Joseph Paquin is showing a veritable midsummer night's dream in filmy cream chiffon flowered with rose and violet and with a half-length summer coat printed similarly against a background of crepe satin. Long and slim in line and worn with loose black gloves just covering the elbow, is another in chiffon printed in pale pink flowers on a black ground, designed with bands encircling the neck and hips and marking the center front from the décolletage to the waist.

Jenny puts a new kind of décolletage on a midsummer evening gown of black and pink chiffon. It is both daring and discreet, very low cut in the back and yet modest because of the fichu draped around the front and over the shoulders making little cap sleeves. The belt of this gown is in rose-colored velvet ribbon.

Midsummer night's "dreams" come in all colors of the rainbow, a large number in white, especially the nets, tulle and plain chiffons, which are so popular for casino wear. But there are also luscious sky-blues and greens, orange tints, sapphire-blues, violets and Renaissance-reds. Winter fashions bid fair to favor richer colors.

New Castle May Plan For Vote This Fall On Voting Machines

The appeal to New Castle citizens to adopt voting machines, voiced by A. W. Chilton of the New Castle Chamber of Commerce at a weekly luncheon meeting of the Lions club Tuesday, has interested many. At the meeting 18 members of the Lions club signed a petition which will be presented to the county commissioners.

Voters of New Castle may have the opportunity at the General Election this fall to decide whether or not voting machines should be adopted and installed for use in future elections. However, no decision has yet been reached as to whether the question will appear on the ballot.

It has been learned that the voting machine question submitted to the voters: City of Butler, Bradford, Altoona, Meadville, Titusville, Beaver Falls, Rochester, Lock Haven, Ridgway and other communities in the state.

Method of Procedure

The voting machine law as enacted by the Pennsylvania State Legislature at its 1929 session, stipulated three methods in placing the question before the voters.

1. County commissioners may submit the question on their own volition.
2. The governing body of any community within the county may pass a resolution requesting county commissioners to submit the question.
3. County commissioners, in receipt of a petition signed by one per cent of the local number of voters who voted at the preceding election, shall place the question on the ballot.

Some are used

At the primary held May 20th, 1930, voting machines made their official debut in many municipalities in the state and hundreds of Pennsylvania newspapers, as well as public officials and voters amended, the new system of balloting, especially making reference to the fact that machines facilitate the compilation of the voters at the close of the polls.

Machines were employed in the following communities: Philadelphia (First Ward); Warren, Warren county; Corry, Albion, East and West Clearfield county; DuBois, Mercer county; Meyersdale, Somerset county; Lancaster, Elizabethtown, Lancaster county; Nanticoke, Hazleton, Luzerne county; New Cumberland, East Pennsboro, Cumberland county; Abington, Benton, Archibald, Blakely, Lackawanna county.

What Papers Say

Comment from newspapers in places where voting machines have been in use follows:

"The efficiency of the new voting machines in Greenville and Farrell is shown by the manner in which the results of yesterday's primaries were completed."

"Within an hour after the polls closed the Farrell count was tabulated and reported and Greenville followed within a few minutes."

"The machines worked perfectly, not a moment's delay was experienced during the polling hours," Sharon News-Telegraph.

"The use of the voting machines in Greenville and Farrell at yesterday's primary, for the first time in the history of Mercer county, more than demonstrated the advantages of this method. The complete vote in both places was available around 8 o'clock, an hour after the polls closed, something that was never before possible even with a light vote and short ballot."

Before the November election, Sharon and other places in the county which approved the voting machine, will have been equipped for service and it is to be hoped that before many years they will have been installed throughout the county," the Sharon Herald.

County commissioners were today in receipt of reports from all of the voting districts in Erie county where voting machines were used for the first time in the primary election on Tuesday. The reports showed that the voters were quick to grasp the method of operation and that the machine way of counting the vote resulted in returns being available within a short time after the close of the polls," Erie Dispatch-Herald.

"With the returns from one precinct completely tabulated seven minutes after the polls closed and the entire city vote received at the Journal office before 7:30, less than half an hour after the balloting ceased, Corry's initial experience with automatic voting machines proved exceptionally satisfactory."

"Use of machines was reported very satisfactory in all places in western Pennsylvania where they were used yesterday. When heretofore it has been early the next morning before complete returns were available, the entire city tabulated vote was received at the offices of the county commissioners last night by 7:45 o'clock," Corry Journal.

"The voting machines were used in DuBois for the first time yesterday and, according to the general consensus of opinion, appeared to meet with general approval. Tabulations of the entire ticket were completed in all the wards by 7:30 o'clock, eight or ten hours earlier than in many instances in past years. The reports were sent into press association quarters and were the first complete tabulations received in the state," DuBois Express.

"The first test of the automatic voting machine in Warren borough has been pronounced a decided success. A total of 3,715 people voted on the 13 machines in the borough yesterday and so far as the Times-Mirror is able to learn, no trouble or delay was encountered anywhere."

"The county commissioners, election officials and voters with very few exceptions, all join in declaring that the machine is a great improvement over the paper ballot."

"All in all it may safely be said that Warren highly endorses the automatic voting machine," Warren Times-Mirror.

McBride Post To Meet This Evening

Reports On Recent Picnic And Other Business To Be Transacted At Meeting

Members of Harry L. McBride Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, will hold an important meeting in the Legion Home Association building this evening, when reports on the recent picnic will be received and much other important business will be transacted.

Commander James A. Bell desires a full attendance of all the members of the post at this meeting.

The picnic held last week was one of the most successful affairs ever held by the post.

Plans for the coming state convention and the Armistice Day celebration will no doubt be taken up at the meeting tonight.

Bell Wins State Membership Honor

James A. Bell, commander of the Harry L. McBride Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, has just received word from the Pennsylvania Department headquarters that he won second individual honors in the state membership contest of the V. F. W. during the past year. He will receive a complete V. F. W. uniform as his prize.

Commander Bell has always been a membership go-getter and during the year which recently closed had close to a hundred new members to his credit.

Plan To Improve Status Of Policing

(International News Service) CLEVELAND, Aug. 6.—Inauguration of a plan to improve the professional status of the art and science of policing, law enforcement and crime detection is planned for Ohio this year by the Association of Ohio Chiefs of Police.

One of the principal items of the program, according to Patrick J. Clark, recently-elected president of the association, will be the sponsorship of a bill in the state legislature to create state maintained regional police training schools for the instruction of young officers, elective constables and marshals and the training of experienced men in special phases of police work.

The association, Clark said, hopes to establish a number of police "crime schools" in centrally located cities of the state where officers can be sent at public expense for a brief but intensive period of training.

Superstitious Drivers Cause Many Accidents

(International News Service) HARTFORD, Conn., Aug. 6.—Motorists are superstitious. They believe that if they have an auto accident, they will have two more in short order. But, says Robbins B. Steockel, state commissioner of motor vehicles, if they do have two more accidents they are simply careless.

Records of the motor vehicle department fail to prove the superstition. "If a person who believes in the 'rule of three' will strive for a proper mental attitude after the first accident, there need be no second or third. The argument for a second and third accident seems to rest entirely in the breaking down of the nervous force, and the operator for the time being may be less able to operate safely."

Senator Heflin of Alabama says the recent defeat of Senator Simmons of North Carolina was an error, but it looked more like a put-out, from where we sat.—The Macon Telegraph.

Burns Home To Get His Wife's Goat

He burned the house down. "She nagged me so," is his excuse. "Finally I got mad. I sent the nine children out to play and burned down our unhappy home."

When authorities attempted to find out why he hit upon that particular gesture as revenge, he responded, "Well, I figured it would get her goat."

Jean is now enjoying peace and quiet in the La Rochelle lockup.

Ruined Local Plane Had Notable History; Eight Piloted Ship

Flames that enveloped and brought destruction to the "Tin City Rocket," the $12,000 Ryan monoplane owned by D. Roy Bradford, at Edensburg field, near Altoona, Sunday evening, marked the end of a story of adventure and daring—of a group of eight men who flew above the clouds in the plane that was to be the "Tin City Rocket" in the Transcontinental Air Derby.

Bradford, Schultz, Merritt, Leedy, Beckley, Bolanz, Stark, and Pickup—all flyers who trusted the "Rocket" in long flights, air races across the continent and missions to far away cities in fogs and storms. The monoplane's cabin was the home of the two local representatives who carried the colors of New Castle in the Transcontinental Air Derby in August, 1928.

First Pilot
Early in 1928, Ed Schultz, Kansas City pilot, "breezed" into New Castle and in a short time became Bradford's first pilot. Perhaps in the annals of New Castle aviation history a niche will be reserved for Schultz. He was the first pilot to be stationed here regularly.

In May 1928 Bradford and Schultz journeyed to the B. F. Mahony factory in San Diego, Cal., and purchased the Ryan plane. Bradford's and Schultz's greatest thrill was received on the return trip with the plane. After nearly four hours in the air the pair found that they were 34 degrees off their course and lost over Lower California. They had been in the air seven hours and when they finally landed they found themselves at Yuma, Ariz.

Today Schultz pilots a huge Sikorsky amphibian on the Miami-Cuba route of the Pan-American service, flying passengers and mail. He had received his first experience in a cabin plane or "big job" on his numerous runs in Bradford's Ryan.

Then came Horace Stark. Horace arrived here from Youngstown. After learning the essentials of flying large planes, he left Bradford field and today is an instructor at Hudson, Pete, owner of an airport there.

Meritt Pilots Plane
In August, 1928, Bradford brought Raymond J. Meritt from the Ryan company, to come here and pilot the "Tin City Rocket" in the Transcontinental derby. Bradford and Meritt started from Roosevelt field, New York, in 24th place, arrived in Pittsburgh in fourth place and finished at Los Angeles in 10th place.

That derby was really a two race derby. The planes raced from New York to Los Angeles and then started to race from Los Angeles to Cincinnati. It was on the return race that the local fliers fought their way back in fog. They flew against the side of a mountain while over Texas and missed the jagged rocks by only six inches.

Today Meritt is flying a Fokker tri-motored plane between Kansas City and Albuquerque, N. M., daily, carrying passengers. He had received much valuable experience while he acted as pilot for Bradford.

Another pilot who learned to trust the big Ryan plane was Edgar Leedy of Youngstown, now operating a passenger service between Youngstown and Columbus. Only 10 days ago Bradford had loaned him the Ryan to use on his route.

E. Beckley came here from Akron. He learned about planes through the Bradford monoplane and today is an instructor in aviation at Akron.

Maj. J. O. Bolanz, a frequent visitor at Bradford field, obtained his real experience flying the Ryan. Today he is an instructor at Lansdown field, Youngstown.

On Saturday C. H. Pickup and Charles Gabriel decided to go to Edensburg, near Altoona to fly passengers. They had success with the Ryan plane. When Sunday evening came the pair had flown 100 passengers. Then they rested their Ryan on the ground before the hangar. A short time later attendants found the plane in flames.

Lists 411 Deaths For Unusual Cause

HARRISBURG, Aug. 6.—The bureau of statistics in the State Department of Health to-day made public a list of 411 accidental deaths during 1929 which are classified as "unusual" in its files.

In that classification extremes of heat and cold to which majority of State residents are exposed took the largest toll. Excessive heat caused 175 deaths and extreme cold 93.

Mechanical suffocation, usually industrial accidents, caused 50 deaths. Food poisoning was responsible for 31 deaths and venomous animals for only four. Injury by domestic animals caused 30 deaths, lightning 20 and starvation 8.

Industrial Leaders Continue Lectures At State College

Corporation Executives Become Schoolmasters For College Seniors

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Aug. 6.—Having been on the possibilities of producing better engineers by giving them a broad survey of industry before their graduation, four large companies which cooperate with the Pennsylvania State College to give such a survey here last year have agreed to continue the work during the coming year. Dean R. L. Sackett of the School of Engineering announced today.

To give the course the General Electric, Western Electric, Westinghouse, E. and M. and West Penn Power Company sent their higher executive officers to the college to become schoolmasters for a selected group of Penn State seniors enrolled in the electrical engineering course. This year they not only will reach the electricals, but will also lecture to a group composed of outstanding seniors from the industrial and mechanical engineering courses.

FIREWORKS BASIS OF NEXT WARFARE FRENCH DECLARE

By RUTH JANE WILLIAMS
International News Service Staff Correspondent

PARIS, Aug. 6.—The next war will be just a lot of fireworks.

That's what military engineers are finding here.

The armaments of the past wars have become obsolete. The new weapons will be skyrockets.

In their experiment here, these engineers have evolved a new method of fighting. This consists of highly explosive rockets which can be pointed and touched off, carrying death and destruction so far and so accurately as a cannon, but without the use of that cumbersome piece of artillery.

These rockets will be loaded with different forms of devastation, such as gases, shrapnel, liquid fire, and when needed, smoke, to form a smoke screen.

Those at work perfecting these rockets are developing a mechanism whereby very accurate aim can be taken, the missile landing in a stated area one mile away.

One advantage to be gained from the use of these rockets in the place of the traditional cannon will be the elimination of the artillery so that the advancing infantrymen, firing their own barrage, would never run the danger of walking into the falling shells.

The exact mechanism of these rockets is a matter of the greatest secrecy, although it is said to be of comparative simplicity.

Halt Rail Traffic To Catch Rider

(International News Service)

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Aug. 6.—Wallace Potter, Gardner, Me., was having a perfectly lovely time on the hottest day of the year. He was enjoying all the breeze to be found on the top of a swiftly-moving freight train, drawn by a pair of electric engines. His hat was off, and his coat was off, and his hair waved white with the wind. Then his train came to a sudden stop, and presently Potter was in the hands of a policeman here. To get him, a towerman had ordered power cut off along a whole division of the New Haven road, tying up traffic for twenty minutes or so. Potter's head was within inches of the deadly wires carrying the current that moves the great traffic of the rails system, and he was in imminent danger of death. But he didn't know it.

Miniature Golf Course Made By
Two Local Boys

The seventh ward boys sometime ago decided that the only way to have a miniature golf course was to make one. So that's what they did.

On a vacant lot next to their home on W. Clayton street, Frank Humphrey and Robert Ricker have built a nine hole miniature golf course. The boys have done quite well in making the course. They have utilized a number of different things in making the course, including pieces of rain spouting to make tubes and little tunnels, a pan, sunk to the ground level and filled with water for a tiny lake, an old automobile tire, in the center of which is the hole where you lose your ball, but the boys admit they know how to get them out again; tin cans to catch the balls when they are driven in the holes, etc. Children have been playing a lot at the course since it has been ready for use, also a few grownups. The two boys, Frank and Bob, making the course, state they are champions at the course and they are tied. Par for a nine-hole course is 24, but these boys state they can do their course in 17, but it takes a lot of practice to get so good. They are getting a lot of fun out of their home made course and so are a good many other people.

South Siders Making
Own Swimming Pool

For the past month or so some twelve to fifteen energetic young men of the South Side have been busy daily. The reason is that they are completing their own swimming hole on Big Run Creek near Pennsylvania avenue. The hole although it is not complete is attended by some 200 bathers daily. A dam which can stand a rather big storm holds the water in one hole making a pool some five feet deep.

Some time ago Sammy Ingle thought of an idea that if a dam could be erected the South Side swimmers could enjoy swimming like the bathers in other sections of the city. He gathered together about 12 more energetic boys and went to work collecting sacks. After gathering several hundred sacks they filled them with sand, clay and stones.

Today a strong dam which can stand a heavy storm is the result of the hard toil of these lads. They have constructed in the middle of the dam a cover for the purpose of cleaning out the pool. Two or three times a week the cover is removed and the pool is cleaned so as to have a sanitary condition. For the past few days the boys have been cleaning out the bottom of the hole so that it will be safe. Every one that uses the pool

Women To Replace
Men As Guides

(International News Service)

PARIS, Aug. 6.—"Let women do it"—has been the cry of men for many ages. They are in Paris. Sprightly young women are now replacing the men as guides and doing it in a very worthy manner. They tramp with tourists around parks and museums, escort them to theatres, music-halls and Montmartre for two and three dollars a day—and up. Naturally the tourists pay all the bills but they also expect to see that ticket-dealers, ushers, garçons, etc., add no extras.

Cook Forest Is Good Camp Site, Officials Say

HARRISBURG, Aug. 5.—The Cook State Forest park located in Clarion and Forest counties contains one of the largest remaining stands of virgin timber in Pennsylvania, officials of the Department of Forests and Waters said today. The park is accessible over good highways and belongs to the people of Pennsylvania for their use and enjoyment. It is an ideal place to spend a holiday or vacation.

The Department of Forests and Waters has provided camping facilities and constructed trails and paths that wind in and out among the monarchs of the forest to places of unusual interest and beauty.

During the past summer numerous improvements have been made and additional camping facilities provided, such as tables, camp shelters, and outdoor fire places. More than a hundred trail signs have been erected and the boundary lines re-painted and marked. A new water system has been installed which provides excellent water, and numerous drinking fountains are scattered throughout the area. "The State highways leading into the park have recently been improved and oiled so as to make travel comfortable.

The animal exhibit which is maintained by the State Game Commission has recently been enlarged, and is an added attraction which is greatly enjoyed by the thousands of people who visit the park, especially the children.

This park may be reached from Clarion and DuBois over Routes 322 and 36, from Warren over Routes 66 and 36, and from Butler over Routes 68 and 36.

Sparkle Does Not Denote Pure Water

(Special To The News)
HARRISBURG, Aug. 6.—All water that sparkles is not pure. Because of the frequent shortage of water during the summer months, Dr. J. Moore Campbell, chief of the bureau of communicable diseases of the Department of Health, said today that short warning should be constantly in the mind of every person.

Dr. Campbell pointed out that when the usual sources of water become low people are prone to seek drinking water from rural springs and streams.

Unless the spring from which water is taken bears the Department's "Pure Water" sign, Dr. Campbell urged that it be boiled.

summer months without forcing them to undergo the experience of listening to sermons in the excessively warm confines of a church.

Four flocks representing the Presbyterian, Methodist, Baptist and Christian churches have joined ranks for the regular Sunday evening session and have arranged to hold their services in Merchants Park, home of the Denver Western League baseball club.

Preachers of the various churches, who will alternate in conducting the services, are of the opinion that the "open air union" will materially increase the number of summer churchgoers—a number that has shown a constant tendency to dwindle since the advent of the hot weather.

The solemn group that gathers in the grandstand offers a strange contrast to the usual gathering in the park. Deep musical chords replace the sharp crack of wood on leather. Instead of carefree baseball fans, there is only quiet prayer that is led by a minister whose pulpit is the far famed "home plate."

COURT TO HEAR PAVING TANGLE

St. Clair Borough Act In Similar Manner To Local Council

St. Clair borough council, near Pottsville, Pa., is faced with the same situation that prevailed here when city council awarded the repaving contract to Woods & Golder, high bidders instead of giving it to Victor Olsen company of Youngstown.

The council of St. Clair borough will be called upon to defend itself in court according to John Lynaugh, a contractor of Pottsville. The council awarded a four streets paving job to John Slattery at a bid of $60,162. Lynaugh bid $57,091.

Lynaugh reprimanded the council and pointed out he had done work for the borough and had performed a good job.

The councilmen defended their action by stating that Slattery paid taxes in St. Clair and promised to use St. Clair labor if he got the job.

Young Girl Battles Parents To Prevent Being Returned To Far-Away Native Land

By Central Press

OKLAHOMA CITY, Aug. 6.—Desire for an American education and an American home has pitted a comely girl of Sweden against her mother and stepfather in a fight which she hopes will prevent them from returning her to her native country.

Lorene Humble, 16 years old, Oklahoma City high school sophomore, likes America and "doesn't want to go back there."

Sent for Lorene
Years ago, Lorene's mother came to this country and settled in Pennsylvania. She married C. S. Wilcox. Shortly after the marriage, they sent for Lorene and she came all the way from Stockholm by herself. Soon after the family moved to Oklahoma City.

Unable to speak a word of English, Lorene began in the primary class and, by skipping grades as she picked up the language, she has advanced to high school.

But complications arose and Wilcox complained to the state bureau of charities and corrections that the girl was "incorrigible." Lorene left the home of her parents and now is residing at the home of a friend.

Wilcox advised the bureau he plans to send the girl to her grandmother, Mrs. Marie Humble, of Stockholm. The girl balked and called authorities.

Sides With Girl
Miss Pauline Throver of the state bureau, after investigating the case, declared the office "would do everything to keep her here."

Mrs. Eula Erickson, assistant attorney general, said that she believed there was no way in which Wilcox could force his stepdaughter to return to Sweden.

Lorene said she didn't dislike her native country, and that she believed a girl has a better chance in America. "I just want to learn to be a perfect secretary so I can get into some kind of work and support myself. I hope it won't take me long. Next winter I am taking all business courses and an English course."

Fewer Children Play Pranks On Trains-Report

Safety Campaign Report Of Railroads Shows Fewer Juveniles Are Injured

Nearly half a million school teachers and school children have been given a direct safety message in connection with the "cross crossings cautiously" campaign systematically carried on by the Central Region of the Pennsylvania Railroad, operating in Western Pennsylvania, Western New York, Eastern Ohio and West Virginia, the past year. In most cases, railroad representatives responded to invitations to address the children in their class rooms, or community rallies were held.

A marked response has been made by the children, with consequent lessening of accidents involving childish pranks or carelessness. Fewer juveniles have been injured the past year, fewer stones heedlessly thrown at trains and fewer small metal objects thoughtlessly placed on the rails.

The wide spread safety campaign's teachings were carried home by the children, subsequent investigations revealed. A considerable additional degree of caution has entered into the lives of the children and their parents, because of the railroad's campaign.

The Way OF THE World

By GROVE PATTERSON

CLOTHES AND PARADES

Preaching dress reform and wearing blouses, a number of men met in New York some days ago to start a crusade against coats and vests in hot weather. They had a luncheon and a parade. Both created little excitement. The average human doesn't care to be herded or paraded, and he will decide for himself what he wants to wear. All the way from gulluses up or down. Speeches about dress reform are about as stimulating as speeches about spelling reform. We are organized up to the hilt now. One thing that has accounted for the rapid advancement of the American republic is the fact that so far we have known where to draw the line in allowing ourselves to be herded into a crusade—whether for setting up a communistic government or wearing pajamas on the street.

WORKING AT VACATIONS

Vacation is hard work for many. It is rather pathetic to see so many people running hither and thither, struggling so persistently to have a good time. They plan for weeks to spend a few days at a summer cottage where they end up by being just one-half as comfortable as they would be at home. The wife, tired of cooking and washing dishes, takes a long, hot trip, and arrives in a different place with fewer conveniences and starts in to cook and wash dishes. Too many vacations are planned without the comfort of the wife in mind.

To be sure, there is something to be said for going away, for seeking a change of place even at considerable discomfort. For the thing we most need in the way of vacation is a change of mind, a change of routine. It is not so easy to re-route the mind's activity and remain at home or in the shop.

IMPATIENCE

Nervous wrecks and dyspeptics come from the habit of impatience. We can't wait to get somewhere or do something. Often the whole matter we are excited about is trivial. W. J. Benedict, New York preacher, says: "It takes courage and persistence. What we need today is more patient understanding. Patience is not merely standing by and waiting. It is power. It is like heat or electricity. It is real patience which gets things done in the long run. Unhappiness and restlessness come from impatience."

THE HUMAN JAW

Today we have softer foods than our ancestors had. We chew less, swallow more easily. Thus the human jaw becomes smaller. It shrinks and is less powerful. On the other hand, the jaw gets more exercise of a different sort. We talk more.

The immediate result was meant a duel and Hamilton died as a result.

Lawnmower Hits Shell, Driver Slightly Hurt

(International News Service)
GROTON, Conn., Aug. 6.—Blank cartridges are powerful things, as Lawrence Allen can testify. He was mowing his lawn when the machine struck a blank cartridge which exploded with such force as to bend all the mower blades.

Wadding was driven into Allen's thighs and his fingers were pricked in dozens of places. Investigation disclosed the shell which apparently had been tossed on the lawn on the Fourth of July.

State Police Here Boost Troop Rodeo

Once in every five years it is the privilege of western Pennsylvania to witness the annual rodeo of the Pennsylvania State Police. Troop D of Butler sponsors the rodeo in its turn, which is every fifth year and this year is the year for Butler.

While the rodeo is held in the Butler Fair Grounds, it belongs just as much to Lawrence County, Beaver, Mercer and Crawford Counties as it does to Butler for Troop D patrols all these counties, patrols it well, and seldom asks any favors in return.

Ought to be Big
This year's rodeo should be a big one, but to be a big one it requires the co-operation of the citizens of the various counties. The eastern counties make these rodeos a huge success. All the net proceeds go into the State Police Fund and not an individual officer or troop profits by the work the put into it, save as it affects them in the pension fund.

The Chamber of Commerce has endorsed the rodeo which will be held on Labor Day in Butler. Alfred W. Chilton, Secretary, has given the local contingent of state police a letter to the Better Business Bureau and the merchants of the city endorsing the project highly and urging the co-operation of the men named.

Tickets are on sale and advertising space in the rodeo program is also being sold. It is to be hoped that New Castle and Lawrence County will back the rodeo and send over a splendid delegation to this unusual display of horsemanship. Tickets can be bought from any of the State Police to the headquarters in the Colonial Hotel.

HIGHLIGHTS OF HISTORY

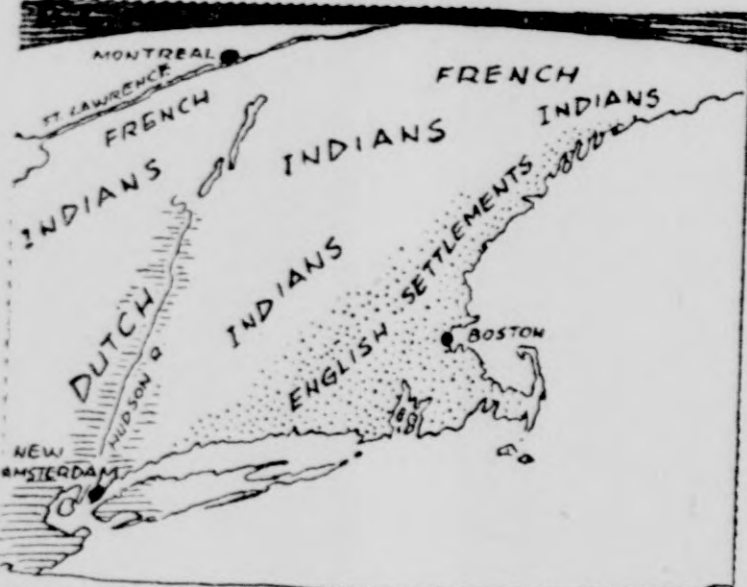

By J. Carroll Mansfield

27. The Puritans—The New England Confederation

(Copyright, 1930, by J. Carroll Mansfield)

IN 1643 THE ENGLISH COLONIES OF MASSACHUSETTS, PLYMOUTH, CONNECTICUT AND NEW HAVEN FORMED A LEAGUE, THE NEW ENGLAND CONFEDERATION, FOR MUTUAL HELP AND STRENGTH IN ALL OUR FUTURE CONCERNMENTS.

EMBEDDED IN BY THEIR ENEMIES, — THE DUTCH, THE FRENCH AND THE INDIANS, — THE NEW ENGLAND COLONIES HAD GREAT NEED OF CLOSE COOPERATION AMONG THEMSELVES FOR ANY EMERGENCY REQUIRING UNITED ACTION THAT MIGHT ARISE.

A COUNCIL, COMPOSED OF TWO COMMISSIONERS FROM EACH COLONY, WAS APPOINTED TO SETTLE INTER-COLONIAL QUESTIONS AND DISPUTES. THE TWO COMMISSIONERS FROM MASSACHUSETTS, THE MOST POWERFUL COLONY, DOMINATED THE COUNCIL.

THE CONFEDERATION LASTED FORTY YEARS. IT SERVED TO BIND THE MEMBER COLONIES IN CLOSER COMMUNICATION AND HARMONY, PRESENTED A UNITED FRONT TO THEIR ENEMIES AND WAS THE WEAPON THAT SAVED NEW ENGLAND IN KING PHILIPS WAR.

SECTION 3. A license will be held responsible for the conduct of all persons who may be employed to sell said goods, wares and merchandise, and will not make or permit any person conducting such sale to make untrue statements or misrepresent articles to bidders as to the description, quality or kind of goods, wares and merchandise offered for sale, nor shall he employ, use, or permit the employment or use of by-bidders, commonly called "cappers," nor shall he offer or make, or permit anyone to offer or make, a false bid or a pretense of buying goods, wares or merchandise, offered, for sale by virtue of his license; nor shall the licensee offer or permit to be offered, or give or permit to be given, any premium or any merchandise whatsoever as a premium or incentive to bidders.

SECTION 4. No license shall be granted under this ordinance for a longer period than fifteen (15) successive days (Sundays and holidays excepted) at any one location.

SECTION 5. No person, firm or corporation, holding a license shall conduct thereunder a sale at any other place or places than that designated therein.

SECTION 7. The applicant, upon being granted a license, shall pay to the City Treasurer for the use of the City of New Castle a license fee of Ten ($10.00) Dollars, and in addition thereto shall furnish to the City Treasurer for the use of the City of New Castle an approved surety bond in the sum of Five Hundred ($500.00) Dollars, said bond to be in full force and effect for a period of thirty (30) days from the date of said license and shall be conditioned for the faithful performance and observance by the licensee of each and all of the provisions of this ordinance.

SECTION 8. No licensee, under this ordinance, shall provide additional goods, wares or merchandise during the conduct of the auction sale, and shall state in his application, previous to the granting of the license, the amount and value of goods already on hand and not delivered and what said goods consist of.

SECTION 9. The provisions of this ordinance shall not, however, apply to judicial sales or sales by executors or administrators, nor to sales of undecorated pledges by or in behalf of licensed pawn brokers in the manner prescribed by law, nor to the sale of farm products, farming implements, live stock, household goods sold from private homes, real estate, machinery and equipment, nor to personal property not in the general line of merchandise.

SECTION 10. Any person, firm or corporation, violating this ordinance or any part thereof, shall, upon conviction, be sentenced to pay a fine not more than Ten ($10.00) Dollars nor more than one Hundred ($100.00) Dollars and in default of payment thereof, imprisonment in the County Jail for a period of not more than thirty days. Each separate sale at any one location, and every day of such sale, without procuring said license, shall constitute a separate violation of this ordinance.

SECTION 11. That any ordinance or part of ordinance conflicting with the provisions of this ordinance be and the same is hereby repealed so far as the same affects this ordinance.

Says Schools Should Not Teach Equality

Whittier College Head Says Education Should Prepare For Other Things

CLAIMS ALL NOT ON SAME EQUALITY

Says People Should Be Content With Lot Most Suited For

(International News Service)
DENVER, Colo., Aug. 6.—"Education should prepare people to live in a democracy of freedom rather than a democracy of equality. People are not equally endowed with intelligence and a democracy aiming at equality will drag all down to the level of mediocrity. A democracy of freedom will fit everyone in the place where he or she is most suited and will be most content."

This startling statement, which would have been condemned as American a few years ago and even today may be considered revolutionary, was made here by Dr. Walter F. Dexter, president of Whittier college, Whittier, Calif., and an internationally renowned figure in educational and psychological circles.

"The American educational system should be constructed along the lines of a railroad system," Dr. Dexter continued. "There should be stops all along the line for those whose abilities dictate that they will be most fitted for residences at the various stations."

"The system is too long. Two years, at least, should be clipped from it, probably in the elementary schools. Competitive examinations then should decide which students should be educated for trades, which for professions, and what group should undertake highly specialized studies in the sciences."

"The average youth reaches his general level of intelligence at the age of 16. It should then be decided for him whether he should step into learning a trade, a profession or into the fields of science."

"The growing scientific organization of the huge mass of rapidly increasing knowledge the world possesses requires that education be made more intense. The time of absorbing it must be cut."

"Under the best system those students able to 'pass' two grades in an elementary school in one year should be allowed to do so. Those who require three years to make one grade should be allowed to do that. But when those students reach the age of 16 it should be decided how high their abilities reach."

"Then, if the backward student remains backward, he should be placed in a trade school and taught a trade. He will be best fitted in the niche in life such education will place him—and most content."

"Likewise, the student of the superior abilities at the age of 16 should begin his scientific studies. And the student of slightly better than average intelligence should be placed in a school which will train him for industry or the professions."

Dr. Dexter, who received his education in several Indiana and Iowa colleges and at Columbia and Harvard, was the first to receive the degree of master of education from Harvard. He accepted the presidency of Whittier in 1923 when he was 36 years old.

Diminutive and boyish in appearance, Dr. Dexter belies his accomplishments of the last few years. When he took over the leadership of Whittier college it was then a small institution with an enrollment of but 400 students and an endowment so small as to be almost negligible. Shortly afterward he raised more than $200,000 in cash for the college.

He did it by staging the $100,000 dinner, selling more than 1300 tickets to Californians to a dinner, receipts of which were to go to the college—at $100 a plate. A wealthy Whittier couple then added $100,000 to the receipts.

Correct this sentence. "I'll take it," said the dignified old gentleman, "if you'll put on one of those horns that plays a tune."

City Should Settle Argument On Pool By Providing One

For some weeks there has been raging up on the Neshannock creek an argument that never needed to have been started, an excitement that should have died a-borning, a battle that needed not have been fought. It is the tilt between the boys and girls who use the swimming pool near the Pennsylvania railroad crossing on Croton avenue, and some of the residents and the owner of property near that point.

Lined up in a box score the argument would look like this:

The Kids.

A—The weather is hot and we want to swim.

B—There is a swimming pool in the creek at this point, and it has been there for 20 years or more.

C—We're going to swim there.

The Residents.

Was the Buck Passed?

Some weeks ago the matter came before city council and after debating it for an hour or so council delegated the matter to Mayor William H. Gillespie, the said delegation having all the earmarks of a piece of first class buck passing.

It was suggested that the city operate a municipal bathing pool but City Solicitor White turned thumbs down on this idea, arguing that the city would be responsible for accidents.

The mayor finally asked the youngsters to forego their daily swim until 1 p. m. and the youngsters agreed, or some of them did. Peace and good order for a couple of days and then a property owner started tearing out the dam. The kids followed him up building it up as fast as he tore it down.

Came then an informal peace conference between the property owners and representatives of the youngsters and after some deliberation it was agreed that the dam should be moved down the creek, that the property owner would pay a man to assist, and this was done, with Councilman Treser lending a scoop to help out the good work.

This was thought to be the solution of the trouble and the war was declared off. Two days ago it broke out afresh with the youngsters refusing to use the new dam, aided and abetted by a number of adults. Net result of the conference, the war, and the loud squawks; the kids are using the old dam, the new dam is just a dam, and on Tuesday councilmen, policemen and city detectives hurried up to the front line trenches to see how much murder was being done and why.

The whole thing is silly and stupid. Both the kids and the property owners are right. The youngsters have a right to swim, and the property owners have a right to expect peace and quietness. The fault seems to lie with the city council in not providing a swimming pool where the boys and girls can beat the heat wave.

Purchasing the old poor farm and converting it into a municipal golf course was a wise move and one that brought the commendation of the public. That took care of the golfers. The tennis players are using municipal courts on Boyles avenue and they are satisfied. But nothing has been done for the swimmers. Why? The argument that the city might be liable for any drownings in a municipal pool could easily find a counter part in a golf accident. If a spectator or a golfer were brained with a speedy golf ball, would city council be liable for the death. If a tennis player tripped in the net and broke his neck would city council be liable for his death? If council is liable for swimming deaths, it is just as liable for tennis or golf deaths, it would seem.

Did Have One.

There was a real pool in the Neshannock some years ago. A group of Rotarians and other businessmen spent hours up there building a pool council installed a bath house and everything was fine until a boy was drowned in the pool. A most regrettable occurrence of course, but boys and girls are just as liable to drown in a pool of their own making, more so, for at the present time there is no precaution taken against accidents. Every man for himself is the slogan.

There is a recreational board in New Castle that provides playgrounds for the boys and girls. Tennis is played, golf is played, mullball, handball, sports of various kinds, but not a thing for the lads and lassies who want to swim.

A few dollars spent in the Neshannock creek would provide a pool that would need to be no deeper than the one which has caused the ruckus. The property owners near the swimming hole have been advised by council to tear out the dam, on the grounds that they have as much right to tear it out as another group has to build it. There are rumors of injunctions and other legal methods, all of which are as needless as a track walker for a steamship line. All the injunctions in the world won't provide the youngsters with a swimming pool, and it certainly seems time that council should take the matter up, provide a pool for the kids, quiet the roar from the irate folks on Croton avenue and settle this tempest in a teapot, or rather a bathing pool.

ROAMING

With Richards

Some News, Some Views, But Mostly Just Observations Of Interesting Things Around New Castle.

There was only one place to roam Tuesday afternoon and the same place today and tonight, the New Castle fair. Out there most of the day Tuesday, and while I think I missed nothing at all, some of it would stand another inspection.

For instance the grange hall. For a person who loves the dinner bell, that hall is a picture. More, its a promise of what could be done in the way of wrapping yourself around food for the ladies who preside over the farms of the county can certainly cook.

Plenty of room to park out there so you need have no worry about that end of your trip. Plenty of room and plenty of cops to see that things are handled right.

With the installation of the new mail pickup device, comes the possibility of a new championship possibility. Who will be the first to be picked up in a mail sack from one of the devices. Of course it is fraught with a certain element of danger. There is the possibility of getting split wide open or of having your neck chopped off, but in these days of tree sitters, rocker champions, endurance flights and endurance runners, anything is possible.

You can't think of anything too absurd or too crazy these days but what somebody will try it. Even conducting coliums.

But here's a chance for someone to get their name and picture before a public that will forget how to spell it in ten days. The first girl, or man to get picked up by a plane lifting mail from a pickup device.

In driving through the country just now, don't toss your cigarette butts or cigar butts out of the widow of the passing car. You're just liable to start a fire. Apparently someone did just that thing on the Ellwood road last night and brush and weeds for a hundred yards were burned off.

Fortunately no particular harm was done, but you might drop the light close to a house or a field of grain. Just now everything is so dry that the Sahara desert doesn't seem to offer any more aridity.

Swimming has been more or less off the list this summer. Too many other things, you know how it is, but last night a few of us slipped out into the country to a little swimming pool on the Big Run. No fancy beach, no electric lights, just a quiet little pool hidden away in a group of elders where the water is always peaceful.

There was a day when the Big Run got all the swimmers, or nearly all. The youngsters down in Slabtown used to go out back of Pennsylvania avenue to a pool they had. Clifton Flat lads had their pool out farther, and those of us who lived on the east side or the Fall Tract, went out to Blue Bell.

Blue Bell has been abandoned for these many years, due to a dam formation on the run, but when it was going what a pool it was. Never very deep, never very large, but always cool and inviting. It was hidden away so far from any passing public that you could start undressing a hundred yards away.

And as for bathing suits. Nobody but a dude wore them, and we never had any dudes out on the East Side and the Fall Tract. Or at least they weren't dudes very long. It was too hard on the eyes.

But our civilization calls for bathing suits now, and if I live to be 100 I don't believe I'll ever get to the place where I can really enjoy swimming with them on.

Pick-up Operation On Plane Carrying Airmail Explained

Attendant In Plane Cabin Lowers Or Raises Cable And Mail Bags

Announcement of inauguration of airmail service in New Castle by means of the pick-up invention of Dr. Lytle S. Adams has brought inquiries from many who have not witnessed the history-making initial demonstration of the device, and who desire to know how the system works.

The device resembles the steel prow of a boat. Plates equipped for pick-up work fly low over the device with a steel cable hanging from a hole in the bottom of the plane cabin. The mail bag to be discharged hangs at the end of the cable.

In flying over the device the mail sack is caught in the nose of the huge machine, and a small steel bar on the cabin slides through a slot, catching the bag containing the outgoing mail. This is done in one operation. An attendant in the plane cabin operates an instrument and lets down or draws in the cable and mail bags.
